Transcript: Show 18January 16, 2012

Up next on ATE-TV.

Your online presence can have a big impact on your career.

There's a large amount of information about all of us posted on the web, and some if it can hurt you when it comes to landing a job, getting a promotion, or starting your own business.

One of the things you have to realize nowadays is that there's an enormous amount of information out there, about any of us. Some of its public, some of it's not public. There have been a few instances as a potential employer where I've gone and just done a quick Google search, and you would be maybe not so surprised these days at what I see. But a lot of that information reflects very poorly upon the potential applicant.
You have to be very, very careful, especially when you're dealing with the security realm, information security, computer forensics, law enforcement.

Be careful with the information that's out there on the Net about you. You want to make sure that you're doing things the right way.

You know, these are the types of things that I think are extremely important to convey to really anyone looking for a position in the private sector.

For more information on anything you've seen today, explore our Web site at atetv.org.

Thanks for watching.